Anniversary Services Held at the Building Yesterday,

INTERESTING ADDRESSES MADE

By Several Gentlemen that Were Lis tened to With Attention by the Large Audience-Secretary Lynch's Talk on the Work of the Association Was One of the Features.

The Y. M. C. A. building on South Market street was crowded yesterday afternoon, the occasion being the services commemorative of the fiftieth anniversary of the birth of the association. The audience was not confined alone to young men, but a large part of it was composed of ladies who take an interest in the workings of the association in Wheeling. The services started at 4 o'clock, President J. N. Vance acting as

The first event on the programme was the praise service conducted by a strong male chorus, after which Rev. Dr. F. D. T. Bickley, of the Thomson M. E. church conducted the Scripture lesson. Then Conducted the Scripture lesson. Then Rov. Dr. D. A. Canningham, of the First Presbyterian church, made an elequent prayer.

A quartette composed of Mesers, C. S. Morrison, W. M. Clemans, F. H. Williams and A. L. Meyer gave an appropriate selection, and then the address by Secretary John C. Linch, "The Past—The organization and development of the associations—Their growth is numbers, secretaries, buildings and works," was delivered. Mr. Lynch said in the course of his address:

"I presume it is well known by all of you that the first association was organized by Mr. George Williams in London. George Williams was born in a small village in the west of England. At the age of sixteen he became an apprentice in a business house in Bridge-water. While there he was led to yield his heart to the Lord Jesus Christ. He had been taught to go to church and to say his prayers, but after his conversion he had that joy and peace that only conces to those who realize that their sins are forgiven. He at once became he had that joy and peace that only comes to those who' realize that their sins are forgiven. He at once became anxious for the welfare of his associatos, anxious for the welfare of his associates, so much so that his family was greatly disturbed. They thought that he would not amount to anything in business. During his stay in Bridgewater many of his fellow clerks were led by his efforts into a like precious faith in Christ. In 1841 George Williams removed to London and took a position in the large drapery establishment of George Hitchcock & Co., St. Paul's Churchyard. Here he found himself one of about a hundred clerks and nearly all of them irreligious. irreligious.

"The same burning zeal for Christ that characterized him at Bridgewater, manifested itself in London. He pray-ed that God would open a way of use-fulness for him among his ungodly com-manions, and he associative and their panions, and he especially prayed that a companion, like-minded, might be sent into the establishment. In course sent into the establishment. In course of time his prayer was answered and the companion came. They prayed together and sought to win confidence by kindness in their intercourse with their fellow clerks and by industrious attention to their duties. They soon induced a few companions to join them in evening meetings for prayer and Bible study. It was custemary then for clerks to occupy rooms in the business houses where they were employed. These cupy rooms in the business houses where they were employed. These meetings were held in George William's room which soon became too small. To obtain the use of another room application to the principal of the establishment became necessary. This the young men feared. The principal was an able man of business but was irrereligious and had done nothing for the comfort and welfare of his clerks. The young men were kindly received and thanked for the interest they had taken in the establishment. The room was thanked for the interest they had taken in the establishment. The room was granted and the principal yielded himself to Christ and joined his young clerks in this spiritual work. Mr. Williams became impressed with the importance of introducing into every large establishment in London religious services such as were then enjoyed in the house of Geo. Hictoneck & Co. He spoke of this broader work to a friend and on Thursday evening June 6, 1814, in Geo. Williams' little bed room was formed a society for the improvement of the spiritual condition of young men and called the Young Men's Christian Association.

and called the Young Men's Christian Association.

"The association was organized with eight members. At the end of the first year there were 160 members. Soon other associations were established and information of their work spread to this country. The young men of Montreal formed the first association in November, 1851. About the same time Mr. Ford, the present proprietor of the Youth' Companion, called a meeting of the Christian young men of Reston and the Christian young men of Boston, and in the Old South Church, December 19, 1851, the first association was organ-ligious organization, having an independent axistence and owning property, aver inade auch progress in the first lifty years of its existence. The Christian Endeavor Society, the Brotherhood of St. Andrew and other organized bodies of young people, the later-Seminary Missionary Alliance and the Students' Volunteer Missionary movement are all indirect outgrowths of the Young Men's Christian Association.

"There are in North America 1,397 associations; in Germany 1,005; in Great Britain and Ireland 813; in Holland 744; in Switzerland 334; France 102, and they are scattered all over the world, making a total of 5,109, with a membership of half a million young men. There are 1,200 secretaries and physical directors employed by the associations of the United States and Canada. In Paris, in Berlin, in Tokio, in all the great cities of christendom are to be found buildings dedicated to the welfare, the education, and the salvation of young men. There are inity-six in England and 291 in our own country valued at more than $15,000,000. The Chicago association was the first to creet a building in 1807, and the same association a few months ago entered the finest and most costly building yet nesociation is few months ago entered the finest and most costly building yet dedicated to the welfare of young men. This structure represents a cost of $1,700,000.

"The chief characteristic of the association has always been its spiritual work, but it aims to bromot the welfare of young men physically, socially, intellectually and spiritually by the use of all practical and consistent methods. The association is admirably adapted to benefit all classes of young men. A mighty work has been wrought, but it is only the beginning of what will yet be. Its future is big with promise. What prophet can fittingly foretell it? "It was a great occasion to the Hebrews of old when the jubilee took piace. This is a great occasion for the Young Men's Christian Associations. To-day St. Paul's stately cathedral resounds with a triumphal service of praise. Men from all the nations of Christendom and from the great mission fields of the Orient are mingling their voices in thanksgiving because the spirit of the Lord came down upon the young dry goods clork in London fifty years ago.

"We often hear young men say they would give themselves to Christ, but they fear it would spoil their prospects in life they would become christians, would give themselves to Christ, but they fear it would spoil their prospects in life it would spoil their prospects in life they would become christians, but they want to succeed in business. George Williams is a living contradic-tion to that idea. Fifty years ago he was an humble clerk. Now he is a mill-ionaire merchant of the great city of London. He is the head of the dry goods house he entered fifty years ago when a young man of twenty. He has in his employ in that establishment five hundred clerks. For these fifty years he has remained in active touch with the association he organized. He is hundred clerks. For these fifty years he has remained in active touch with the association he organized. He is abundantly honored holding the presidency or chairmanship of no less than thirty religious and philanthropic societies. In recognition of his service as founder of the Y. M. C. A., a few years ago a seciety connected with the French government awarded him the gold medal given annually to some gold medal given annually to some great benefactor of mankind. Just regreat benefactor of mankind. Just recently, her majesty, the Queen of England, has been pleased to confor upon him the dignity, of knighthood. Mr.

Williams ranks prominently among that splendid company of philanthopists and earnest christian workers that the English nation has given to the world.

"To-day at the great jubilee he is honored by men from America, from Great Britain, from France, Germany, Italy, from Sweden and Russia, from Egypt, India, Japan, from Austria and the isles of the sea, and from Jerusalem where our master labored and gave his life for men."

After the singing of Hymm, No. 81, Mr. Guy R. C. Allen delivered an eloquent address touching on the present work of associations, what the local association is deling for the welfare of the young men of Wheeling, and what the sociation is doing for the welfare of the young men of Wheeling, and what the others are doing in America and with college students, railroad men and men in all avocations. The talk was interesting throughout and was listened to with great attention.

Mr. Aifred Paull spoke of the future of the associations, dwelling on the possibilities of association work. This was another interesting discourse. At the conclusion of the services, Rev. A.

SCRIPTURAL INSPIRATION The Subject of Rev. Mr. Hayden's Sermon Last Evening.

At the First Christian church last night Rev. William H. Hayden preached on "The Inspiration of the Scriptures" to a large congregation. He advanced no argument to show the inspiration of the writers, but that the truth and inspiration of the Scriptures were proven by the relation of the Scriptures were proven by the relation of the Scriptures were proven by the relation of the second influence on the hearts of believers. The select of God in reading the Lible was also proof of its divine origin. That it had withstood the attacks and expections of infidels for centuries and was still flourishing in nearly two handred languages was also envience of its truth. Those people who say the Bible is a good book and that Jesus was a good man, but will not admit the inspiration of one nor the Godliness of the other, are wrong. Either the Bible is the inspiration of one nor the Godliness of the other, are wrong. Either the Bible is the inspiration word of God or it is take. Jesus is either the sen of God or a fraud. There is no middle position, we must accept or reject. After the sermon, which was listened to with evident attention and interest, several found comfort at the mercy seat and the ordinance of baptism was administered to several. the writers, but that the truth and in-Semi-Centennial Sermons.

At St. Matthew's church, Yesterday St. Matthew's church was reopened after general renovation. There was a good congregation, and a festure of the services was the presence of the full vested choir, which will hereafter take part in all the morning services, as well as the ovening services, as heretofore. Dr. Swope's sermon was short, and there were no formal reopening exercises. He addressed his remarks to the beautifying of the material temple, and drew from it a lesson as to temple, and drew from it a lesson as to the spiritual.
